CONTENTS – APRIL 2005

50 Editorial – Bednets treated with pyrethroids against malaria mosquitoes – Chris Curtis

52 The importance of microorganisms in organic agriculture – J. Zarb, R. Ghorbani, A. Koocheki and C. Leifert reveal the importance of microorganisms in organic farming systems

56 R&D news – reports on new products, new applications and new uses

59 Wanted: Regional stakeholder collaboration for pesticide risk reduction in Latin America – George Ekström discusses ways to reduce risks from pesticide use in Latin America

64 The potential for advances in crop allelopathy – Stephen O. Duke, Regina G. Belz, Scott R. Baerson, Zhiqiang Pan, Daniel D. Cook and Franck E. Dayan outline the known cases of crop allelopathy and point the way forward to using this technology commercially

69 A small moth to cut the giant sensitive plant down to size in Australia – Louise Lawrence and Tim Heard describe the problems that are being caused by mimosa in Australia and how a leaf feeding looper is being trialed as a means of control

71 Climate variability, climate change and crop productivity in the tropics – Andrew Challinor, Tim Wheeler, Julia Slingo and Tom Osborne describe a model that allows the impact of climate on yields in tropical crops to be predicted

75 Challenges and Future of Pesticide Toxicology – J. Marshall Clark discusses the challenges that are faced by pesticide toxicologists and suggests the way forward

78 Spinosad: A Promising Tool for Integrated Pest Management – M. Sarfraz, L. M. Dosdall, and B. A. Keddie cover the properties of spinosad and explain why it is a promising tool for IPM strategies

85 Regulatory news – new registrations, environmental effects and withdrawals

88 Biotechnology news – developments in molecular biology and genomics

90 Company news – reports on mergers, acquisitions, collaborations and sales

92 Observations on the ‘paraquat argument’ – Prof Anthony Trewavas offers another perspective on the issue of risk from pesticide use following the publication in Outlooks on Pest Management of articles that examined critically the arguments for and against paraquat use

94 Communication to the editor

96 Calendar of events

COVER PHOTOS: ‘Sunflowers in Fargo, North Dakota’ (Photo by Bruce Fritz) and ‘Colorado Beetle’ (Photo by Scott Bauer), both reproduced courtesy of USDA-ARS. ‘Fusarium infected wheat’ and ‘Annual weeds in winter cereal’. Photos reproduced with permission of Rothamsted Research